

LEILANI'S COMMITMENT TO THE ENVIRONMENT

Leilani is not only a racecar driver, she is a biologist and activist. Leilani purchases an acre of tropical rainforest for every race she runs in the Indy Pro Series to offset her carbon footprint. She holds a bachelors Degree in Biology specializing in Ecology, Behavior, and Evolution from the University of California San Diego. Leilani hosts the eco website where she posts the latest news on clean energy, conservation, alternative fuels, and wildlife protection. In 2008 Leilani made a trip to Capitol Hill where she spoke to members of Congress on behalf of the Lieberman Warner Climate Security Act. She is a long time vegetarian and promotes sustainable living alternatives. For more information about Leilani's environmental activities, please visit CarbonFreeGirl.com.

LEILANI'S ENVIRONMENTAL STATEMENT

I realize that being a racecar driver, I am not in an environmentally friendly sport. That is why I am doing everything I can to reduce my carbon footprint such as using renewable energy, recycling, and adopting tropical rainforest for every race I run. As citizens of Earth, we all need to work together to take care of our world. So far, we have not been doing a very good job of that. The situation is dire and requires our urgent attention. Now is the time to make a change. We need to reduce our use of fossil fuels, commit ourselves to renewable energy sources, and conserve the biodiversity that we have on Earth before it is lost forever. Together we can make enough noise to get the attention of the decision makers in our local and national governments. Let's all do our part to help save our Earth for future generations to enjoy as much as we have. It is our responsibility -- and our privilege -- to do so.
